F. M. ATWOOD'S

Salesmen have today begun a novel and somewhat interesting but friendly contest arising from the various and somewhat conflicting opinions of these experienced men as to the salableness of various lines of Suits and Overcoats, and so we propose to make it interesting for the "boys" to vindicate their respective judgments in a 10 days' trial, as herewith announced. The fact is, in a great stock of Clothing like this, where so many good things are gathered, and with all large retailers, jobbers, and manufacturers in many branches of business, the nice point to decide always is, How will this line sell? how many shall we produce? Ofttimes too scanty preparations of the popular things are made; too much of what WE like, but YOU don't buy, are provided, and so this contest will be one of peculiar interest. We shall award a generous prize to our most successful salesman, and shall benefit every customer who patronizes us during this sale.

Please notice we have named the various lots of goods after our salesmen. If the description interests you ask for the goods by the man's name which they bear and you will be shown through our stock with the utmost consideration.

N. B.—The Trade especially invited.

Wonderful Improvements.

It's always been our purpose to elevate the character of ready-made clothing to a par with or a little above the custom tailors' make. Improvement after improvement is constantly going on. Every season's productions show a wonderful progress, and our stock of winter clothing, now ready, excels that of any former season.

Take our men's and young men's business and dress suits—the variety of materials, the general appearance, fashioning, and workmanship—are all perfect. They comprise Scotch and Irish Cheviots, Cassimeres, Worsteds, Tricots, Pique, and many others.

We keep our hats where there is plenty of daylight, and we've the most comprehensive department you'll find in the city. American and English makes of silks, seals, felts, and children's novelties.

Shoes in abundance for men and boys.

If you're in search of underwear we've all makes.
